Special projects

10. Assistance for Artefact conservation training from funds of American ambassador

With the aim of training ten officers attached to the Archeological Department for artifact conserving, a grant of USD 40"120 had been offered from funds of American ambassador in Sri Lanka in this year. The training of this project to be conducted by chief conservator and Museum Superintendant in Artefacts Conserving Division of Metropolitan museum in Newyork, USA.

This project is implemented under two main stages. Under the first stage, it is expected to conduct an quality appraisal on conservation level of artefacts, weather effects, storing facilities and technical facilities available for conservation. For this purpose, collection of artefacts in custody of departmental lab and artefacts lying in the Anuradhapura museum had been selected. As well, a quality appraisal on conservating knowledge and qualification of officers who had been picked up for training to be done.

At the second stage, it is planned to conduct a training workshop on conservation, basic chemistry, science of liquid and damage controlling for ten selected officers.

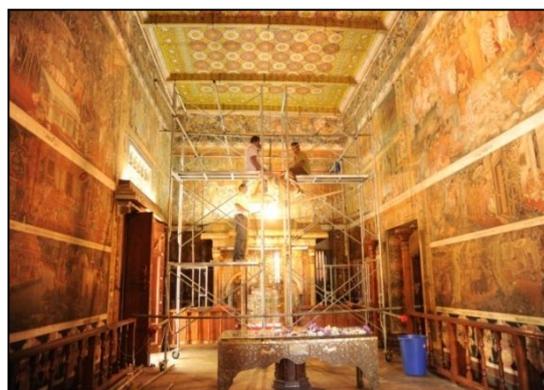

Visit of American ambassador to Archeological Department for offering this fund and determining project matters in August 2013 ;

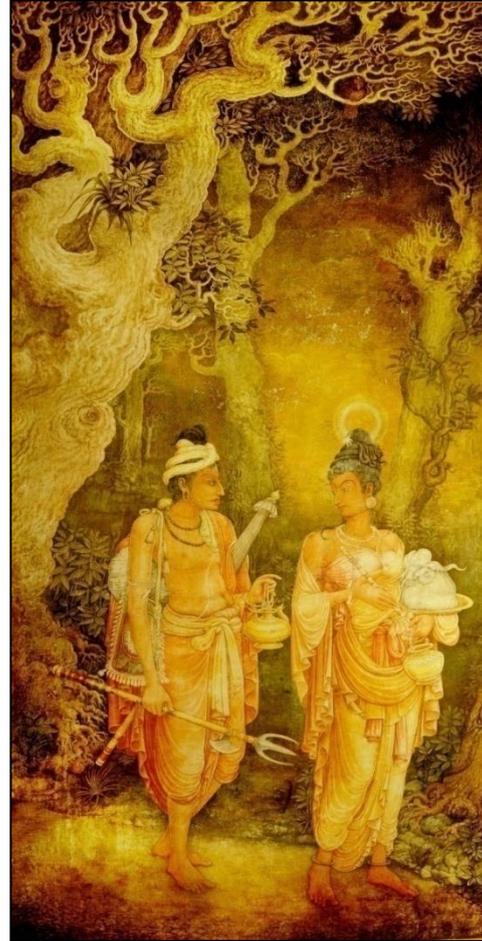

11. Project to record frescoes of Kelaniya Rajamaha temple through photos

Recording frescoes through photos had been commenced on 02nd April 2013 with the intention of conserving frescoes in old and new statue houses of Kelaniya temple as its first stage.

The frescoes of this temple hold a very important archeological and aesthetic value. The frescoes of Kandy ear occupy in two parts of old shrine room new shrine room is decorated by arts drawn by famous artist called Walimuni Solius Mendis for 19 long years. These frescoes could be called as the turning point of Sri Lankan Drawing culture. By now, these frescoes are being destroyed from colour layer to inner parts in a very subtle way. As a preliminary step of conserving those frescoes, the main aim of this project is to photo capturing by digital medium. As well, it is expected to safekeep them for rising generation. ;

This project had been continued up to end of year 2013 and photo capturing of all photos of Solius Mendis had been accomplished. It is proposed to photo record the frescoes in old shrine room in the year 2014.
